For the last decade or more carolyn manosevitz has grappled with overcoming pain and suffering after the Shoah through her art and her teaching. The search has been a very personal one given her family’s connection with the death and destruction of the Nazi era. She has taken this search to her art studio as well as to her classroom at Austin Presbyterian Seminary in Texas and other Christian seminaries in the U.S. The goal of this search has always been the same – personal healing. She also has sought to share this experience of healing with others, in particular with her Christian brothers and sisters. For, in the end, healing, as she makes clear in her writings, is found in the presence of the other.

carolyn h. manosevitz is an instructor in the Department of Art, Colorado Mountain College, Aspen, CO, visiting professor at the Austin Presbyterian Theological Seminary, Austin, TX and Wesley Theological Seminary, Washington, DC. She has been a visiting lecturer at the Iliff School of Theology Summer Program, Denver and Aspen, CO. She has also held the Carpenter Visiting Professorship of Jewish Studies at Wake Forest University Divinity School, Winston-Salem, NC. carolyn earned her M.F.A. at the University of Texas and her B.A. (Cum Laude) at the University of Minnesota. Her art is part of private and corporate collections including Yad Vashem and the Ghetto Fighters’ Museum, Israel.
